

Cookie Policy

What are cookies and why do we use them?

At Bembridge Dental practice, we use technical cookies to enhance your experience using our website, as almost all websites do today. Cookies are small text files that store information on your computer for a variety of functions. User consent is not required for a technical cookie. We do not use profiling cookies, and if this changes we will update our cookie policy and privacy notice and obtain your consent for their usage.

We will never use cookies to:

- Store your personal information
- Pass on your information to third parties
- Record statistics
- provide tailor made offers to you

If you still don't want us to use cookies, that's fine. Here's some information on how to disable them:

•Mozilla Firefox: Click 'Tools' at the top left of your Firefox window. Then click 'Options' and a smaller window should pop up. Click the 'Privacy' tab, and choose 'use custom settings for history' from the drop down box. Then you can uncheck the 'Accept cookies from sites' box to remove all cookies, or 'Accept third-party cookies' to just remove third party cookies. You can also choose to delete cookies every time you close firefox, or make it so you approve every cookie as they are about to be used by a site by keeping the 'accept cookies' box checked and choosing 'I close firefox' or 'ask me every time' in the 'Keep until:' drop down box.

•Google Chrome: Click the spanner icon on the main toolbar, then choose 'options' and then 'under the hood'. Click on the 'Privacy' option, and then 'content settings'. Clicking on 'cookies' will give you options to; delete all cookies, block all cookies, allow all cookies or to set preferences for different websites.
